Market Men May Contest the Action of the Commissioners.

CONSULTED WITH MR. BIRNEY

t Is Claimed That Under the Law the Officials Have No Right to Interfere With the South Side of B Street-New Letter Concerning

The wholesale market problem is still in a state of uncertainty, the dealers having in view the inconveniences in prospect at the new ground and the Commissioners being without funds with which to prointely no protection against the freezing weather of the coming winter. Where most of them are now located they are shielded in large measure by the markethouse, but in the new quarters there will not be even a shed to keep off the rain and snow.

For these and other reasons the dealers are casting about for relief. They have consulted United States Attorney Birney with the view of contesting the right of the Commissioners to clear the obstructions from the south side of B street, and have referred to him an old law which, they claim, has never been repealed. Section 226 of an act for the government of the District, page 26, revised statutes, they re-gard as conclusively against the vanishty

FULL SCOPE OF THE LAW

Regulations Concerning Contagious Diseases Must Be Carried Out.

Test Case as to Charging the Cost of Disinfection Decided by the Commissioners.

Under the law enacted to prevent the spread of contagious diseases in the Dis-trict, it is made incumbent upon the health office, in conjunction with the attending physician, to cause the premis as well as the bedding and clothing that became contaminated to be thoroughly disinfected, and the expense attached must be borne by the occupant of the dwelling and the owner of the ciothing.

While this is a scenning hardship in many natures, the health office has no discretion in the matter, the law expressly providing that to secure payment of the charges by the District the applicant must file an affidavit setting forth that he or she is too poor to note the expense. A case in point came before Dr. Woodward this morning, where a citizen ob-jected to pay the bill incurred for disinfecting some clothing, and yet could not make the affidavit required. He con-tended that he was unable to pay the amount, notwribstanding the value of his possessions exceeded the legal limit of

To settle all doubts as to the scope of the law. Dr. Woodward submitted a sam-ple case to the auditor, to know if he would pass a voucher that omitted the value that the regulations would have to be complied with, but in this particular case it was arranged so as not to work a hard-ship to the individual. He was thrown out of employment by reason of the presence of scarlet fever in his bouse, and was unabl to pay the charges in order to take the clothing from the station, and it was decided to await his convenience.

Dr. Woodward said this morning that had Congress passed the appropriation bill as asked for at the last session the health department would have by this true. partment would have by this time been in a position to do the disinfecting without charge in any case. That is the object of establishing a disinfecting plant, now under contract, and what will now be needed is an appropriation for a force adequate to the eds of the service. needs of the service.

The argument advanced in support of the adoption of such a method is that while the citizens will do the work of disinfecting their own premises to the best of their ability, there is necessarily a lack of effi ciency in all such cases, resulting from in experience, and that with a trained force at command the work can be thoroughly and systematically done. It is the purpose of the health department.

They Testify Against the Husband of Mrs. Olmstead.

ONE WITNESS WAS RATTLED

derable Difference Shown by Counsel in Statement Made on Two Occasions—Evidence That the Deceased Was Not Allowed to Give Away Her Cast-Off Clothes.

Another week's session of the famous inistead will trial began in Justice Bradley's court this morning with the cross-examination of Mrs. Nash, the colored cook formerly in the family of the Olmsteads. The usual assembly of court hangers on was so far augmented that I'ew scats in the spacious room were left vacant when the eleven members of the jury took their seats. Mrs. Nash was put through a harassing fusitade of cross questions by Mr. Davis, one of Mr. Olmstead's attorneys. The voman was assailed on the statements he made in her affidavit taken at the former trial of the case. The witness ad-mitted that she had made a statement of the facts in the affidavit to a lawyer and that he took notes of what she said. He then went away and came back with the statements typewritten. She placed her mark at the end of it after it had been read to her. She made no corrections at that time. Today she admitted that there were a number of mistakes in the paper.

SHE THOUGHT IT WAS. "On the evening of June 6, 1889, you said the will was signed," said Mr. Davis.

How did you know it?" "I thought it was," replied the witness.

"It thought it was," replied the witness.

"But you said in your affidavit that you saw Mr. Ohnstead, Mrs. Olmstead and the lawyer in an adjoining room signing the will," persisted Mr. Davis.

"I supposed they were doing that," answered Mrs. Nash.

"What nade you suppose."

swered Mrs. Nash.
"What made you suppose?"
"Well, I heard papers raiting. Then a neighbor, Mrs. Brown, came in, and though Mrs. Oinstead was sick, she persisted in running back into her room to show her a deli-baby she had made for some of the Johnstown flood sufferers. Mrs. Oimstead scolded me afterward for admitting the lady, as she said her husband had some very important capers about the

"It is," replied the witness. The examination of the witness was momentarily interrupted by the placing of President Snyder, of the National Sare beposit and Trust Company, upon the stand. He was called upon by Mrs. Webb's counsel. He said that Mr. Hayward Hutchinson had formerly had a box in the institution of which he was president.

OUESTION BULLED OUT. QUESTION RULED OUT.

The counsel for the caveator sought to prove that Mr. Olmstead and his triend, Mr. Jeffries, on one occasion came and asked for the box of Mr. Hutchinson. On the objection of Judge Wilson the question was raised out, and the examination of Mrs. Nash resumed.

Mrs. Ashie Baake, a colored seamstress and after ward cook for the Olinsteads was and afterward cook for the Oliusteads, was and alterward cook for the Omisteads, was the next witness called. She had been in the family for a number of years. In answer to a query by Mr. Ross Perry, she said that Mrs. Olmstead had been a sad woman apparently during the latter years of her life.

"In the months of 1893-94," said Miss.

Blake, "Mrs. Olinstead cried a great deal, indeed. Once she gave me one of her cast-aside sateen dresses. I took it home with me. A few days later she came to see me.
"I came after the dress I gave you." "I came after the dress I gave you," Mrs. Oinstead said. 'You will have to bring it back, for Mr. Oinstead learned that I gave it to you and he said he didn't want me to give things away unless he consented to it.' She never gave me anything but a parasol after that."

The testimony of the witnesses remained substantially intact after the cross-exam-ination had been concluded. Immediately before the court adjourned for the noon recess Dr. Sowers, who attended Mrs. Oimstead during her last ill-ness, was called to the witness stand.
